National Students' Seminar (virtual)

*Disease, Health and Humanscape in Literature, Mass
Culture and Beyond*

Elysian is a National Students' Seminar organised annually by the students of the Department of English, Cotton University. Elysian aims to draw the best minds of the country together, giving them a platform to present and share their ideas with a wide range of intellectuals, academicians and students. The first chapter, organised during the 2018-19 session, commemorated the centenary of the end of the Great War. However, continuing the seminar became difficult due to the pandemic and since the student teams preferred the offline mode, the second chapter of Elysian remained a dream for two years.

That dream has finally transitioned into the online mode and Elysian is back again with even greater zeal. This chapter is dedicated to "Disease, Health and Humanscape in Literature, Mass Culture and Beyond" which will include not just pandemics but the role of any contagion in real life and literature.
